Architectural Case Study

Project Overview

One Sydney Harbour is one of Australia's most prestigious residential developments, designed by Pritzker Prize-winning architect Renzo Piano in collaboration with Lendlease. The interiors, designed by State of Craft, draw inspiration from European conservatories and celebrate craftsmanship through the use of natural materials, bespoke furniture and exclusively Australian artworks.

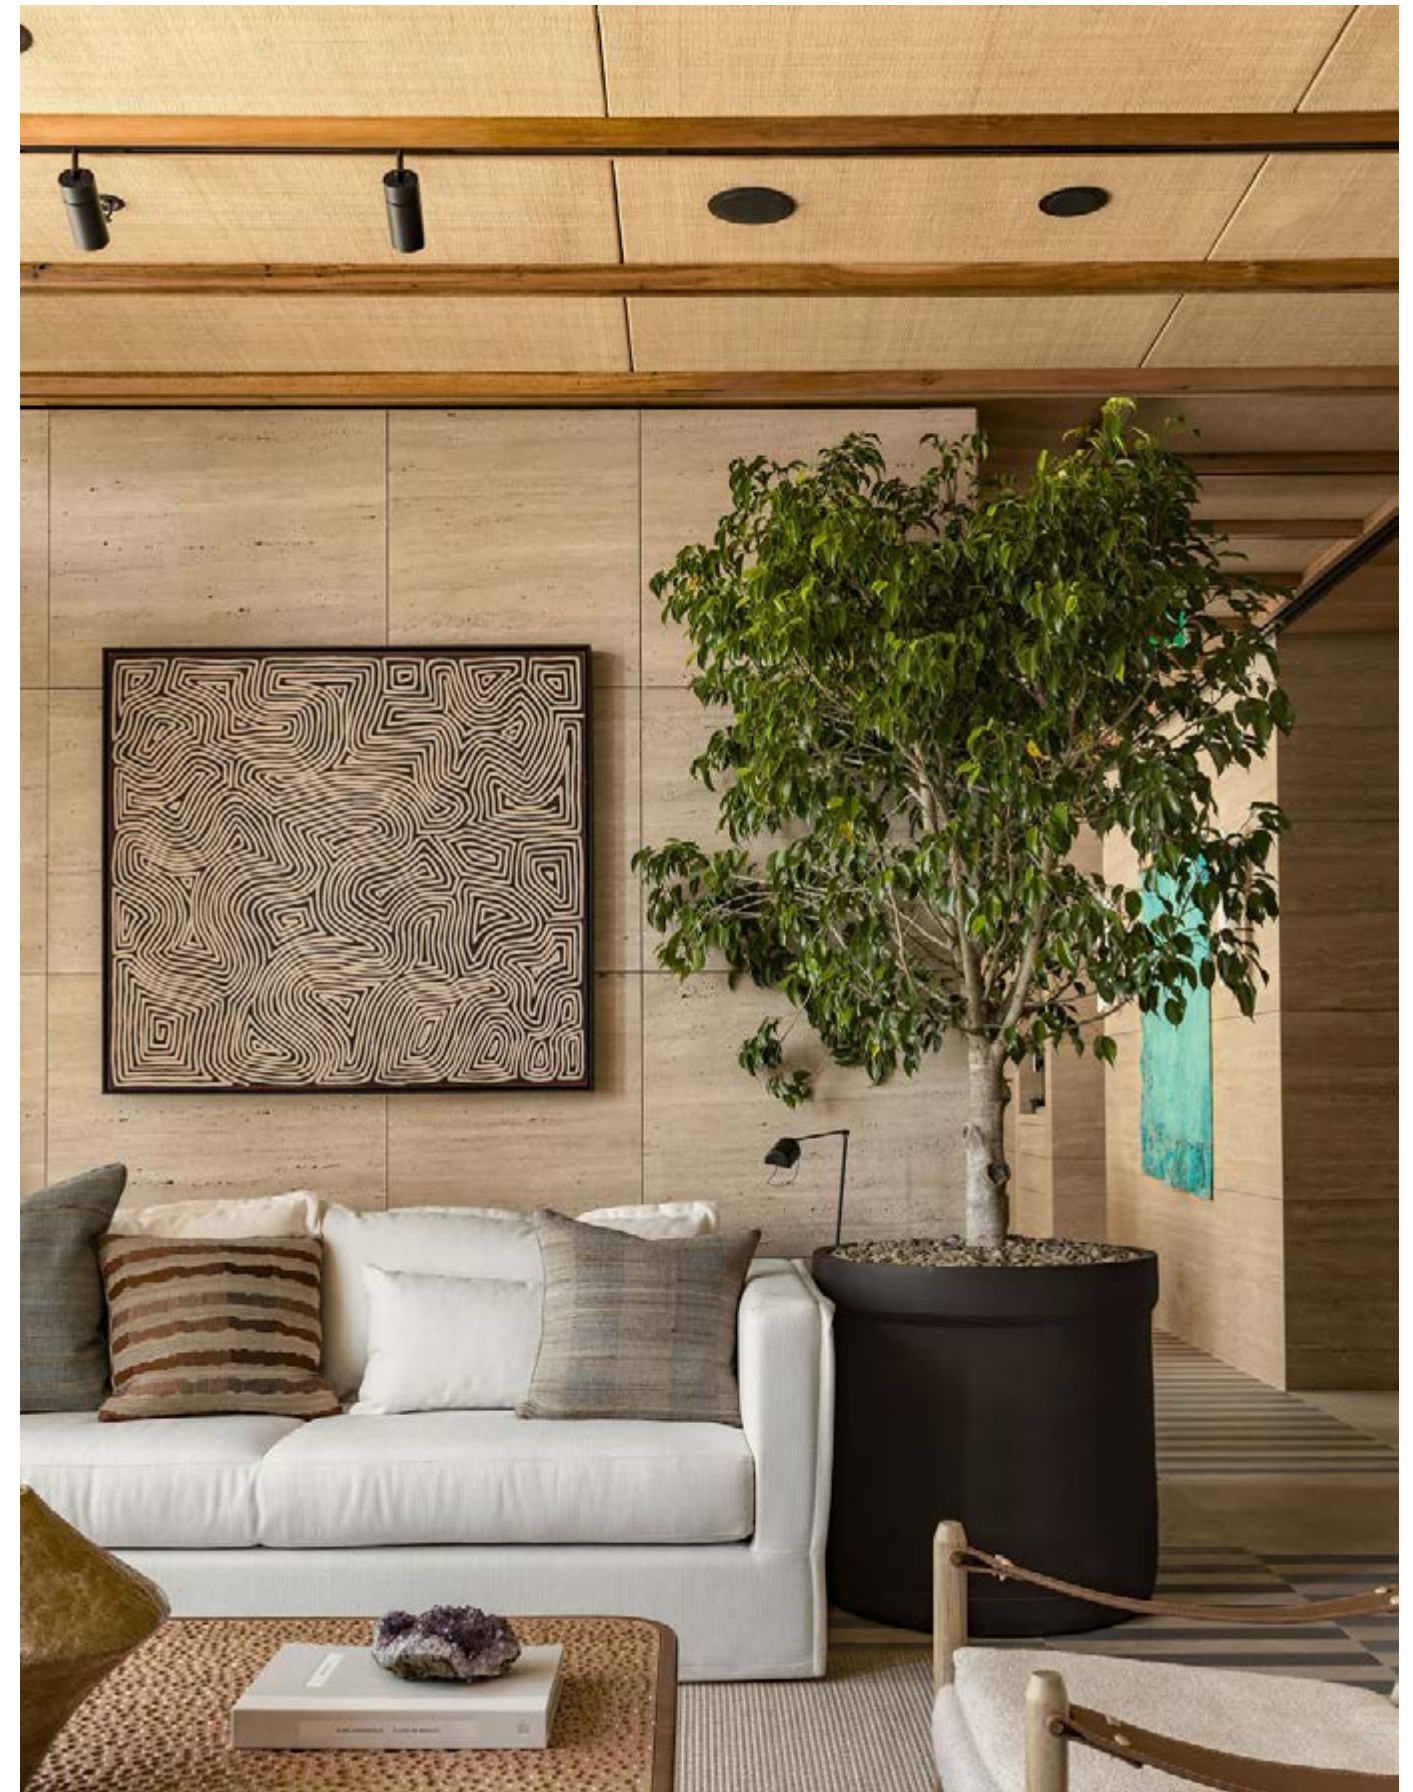

The project champions texture, authenticity and locally sourced materials, creating a refined residential environment that feels both luxurious and deeply connected to nature.

Project Scope

House of Bamboo worked in collaboration with Supawood to deliver the rattan ceiling featured throughout the project.

Our scope included:

- Consultation on the use of rattan within a premium residential environment.
- Close coordination with Supawood, the builder and the onsite delivery team throughout the installation.
- Technical guidance to ensure the rattan performed successfully within a controlled interior environment.
- Support during installation to achieve the high-quality finish expected for a landmark development.

Outcome

One Sydney Harbour demonstrates how natural materials can be successfully integrated into world-class residential architecture. Working alongside Supawood and the onsite construction team, House of Bamboo helped deliver a refined finish that met the exacting standards of this landmark project.

The project reflects a broader design philosophy centred on craftsmanship, texture and natural materials. Being involved in a development that celebrates Australian craft and organic finishes was a fantastic opportunity for House of Bamboo, reinforcing our expertise in delivering premium natural solutions for architecturally significant projects.
